

Comment

---

Supplementary information to:

More floods, fires and cyclones – plan for domino effects on sustainability goals

A Comment published in Nature 592, 347–349 (2021)

<https://doi.org/10.1038/d41586-021-00927-x>

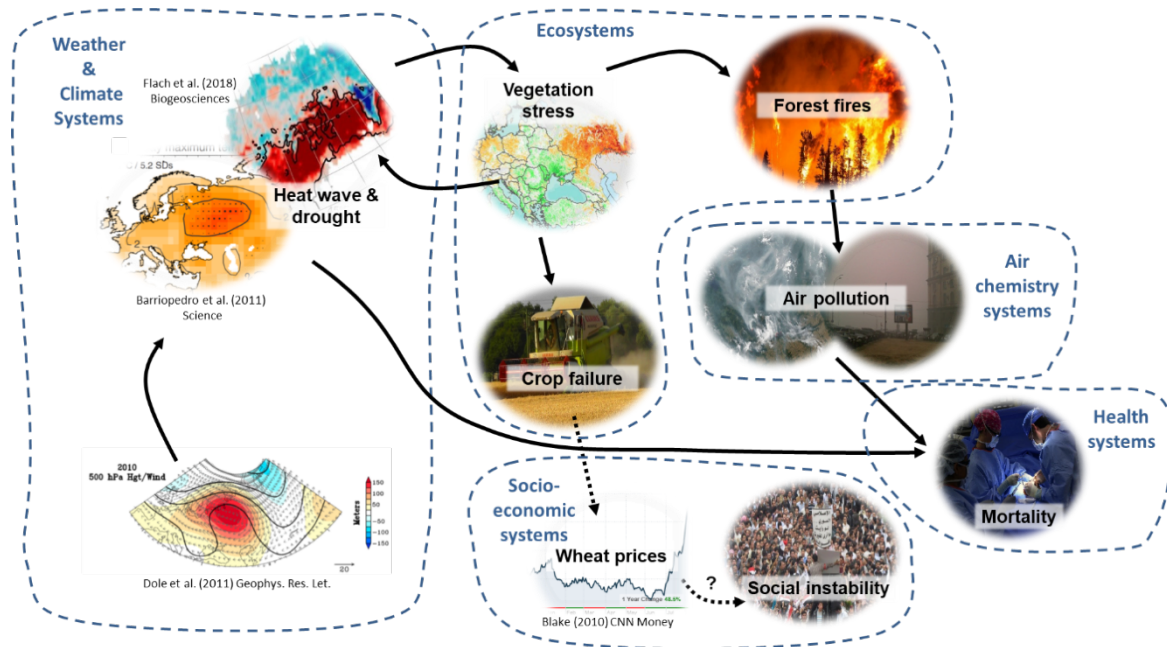

---

Markus Reichstein, Felix Riede & Dorothea Frank

---

Supplementary information to the Nature Comment article ‘More floods, fires and cyclones — plan for domino effects on sustainability goals’ (Nature 592, 347–349; 2021)

Markus Reichstein, Felix Riede & Dorothea Frank

Supplementary Figure S1: Systemic effects of climate extremes exemplified by the Russian heatwave. These effects can transcend sectors and span across country borders, such as the hypothesized social instability with the Arab Spring.

Acknowledgements: We would like to thank the VolkswagenStiftung for supporting the 2019 Herrenhäuser Conference Extreme Events - Building Climate Resilient Societies (<https://climate-extremes-emergent-risks.org/hkextremes2019/>). In addition we thank Future Earth, the International Research on Disaster Risk (IRDR), the World Climate Research Program (WCRP) and the World Weather Research Program (WWRP) for endorsing the RISK-KAN (www.risk-kan.org), which strives to tackle the challenges mentioned in the article.